President's Message

by Dr. Gary N. Sisson

New Beginnings

As a New Year begins, we often leave the Holiday season with a renewed sense of hope. Having been away from our normal routines and surrounded by family and friends, we begin to optimistically plan and look forward to the coming year. Those of us brave enough to make New Year resolutions soon find ourselves struggling to keep them. Life is a series of cycles, with history often repeating itself despite our best efforts at prevention. Then along comes the proverbial pearl that changes everything.

In the months following the victory at Yorktown and the cessation of hostilities in the American Revolution, our new country truly hung in the balance between anarchy and a return to monarchy (some wanted to declare General Washington king). The Articles of Confederation lacked many provisions for dealing with the aftermath of war. A stronger central government was necessary, and the resulting United States Constitution was and is a testimony to the unprecedented wisdom of our Founding Fathers in bringing about a successful new beginning. Over a year ago I studied the Federalist Papers. It took me months to read through them with any degree of comprehension, but I finished them and would encourage each of you to do the same. Thomas Jefferson considered them "the best commentary on the principles of government which ever was written".

One of the objects of the NSSAR is "to carry out the purposes expressed in the Preamble of the Constitution of our Country...". Fellow compatriots, please review the Preamble and the Constitution in its entirety. As new beginnings go, it ranks among the best in the history of mankind.

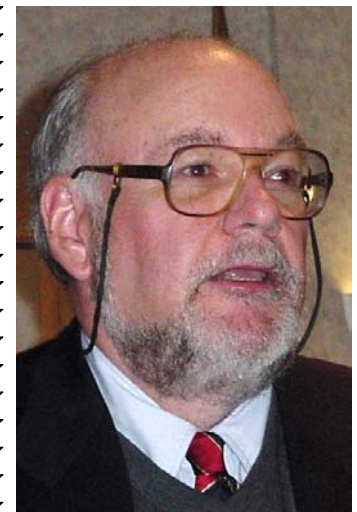

HAPPY NEW YEAR!

Dr. Cal Christman's Intriguing analysis of the Pearl Harbor attack pointed out poor strategy and planning on both sides of the conflict. He distributed copies of a "war alert" that was sent to all US Naval forces in the Pacific on November 27, 1941. It predicted an amphibious invasion. General Billy Mitchell was one of the most famous and controversial figures in American airpower history. He was reduced in rank and eventually court martialed and convicted of insubordination because of his outspoken views on the potential of airpower and the ineptness of US military strategists of that day. In his presentation, Dr. Cal Christman's quoted Mitchell, as follows: "The Island of Oahu, with its military depots, both naval and land, its airfields, water supplies, the City of Honolulu with its wharfs and supply points, forms an easy, compact, and convenient object for air attack ... I believe, therefore, that should Japan decide upon the reduction and seizure of the Hawaiian Islands ... the attack will be launched on Ford's Island [Pearl Harbor] at 7:30 a.m." – Billy Mitchell, 1924
